A lush green forest with a wooden staircase leading down to a red kayak on a river. The scene is captured in a vertical orientation, with the forest filling the upper two-thirds of the frame. The water in the foreground is dark and reflects the surrounding greenery. A red kayak is positioned in the lower center, with a person visible inside. A wooden staircase leads from the forest down to the kayak. The overall atmosphere is serene and natural.

SLOW DOWN. UNPLUG. BREATHE DEEP.

— A journey to Tasmania is a rare chance to disconnect from stress and reconnect with the things that matter.

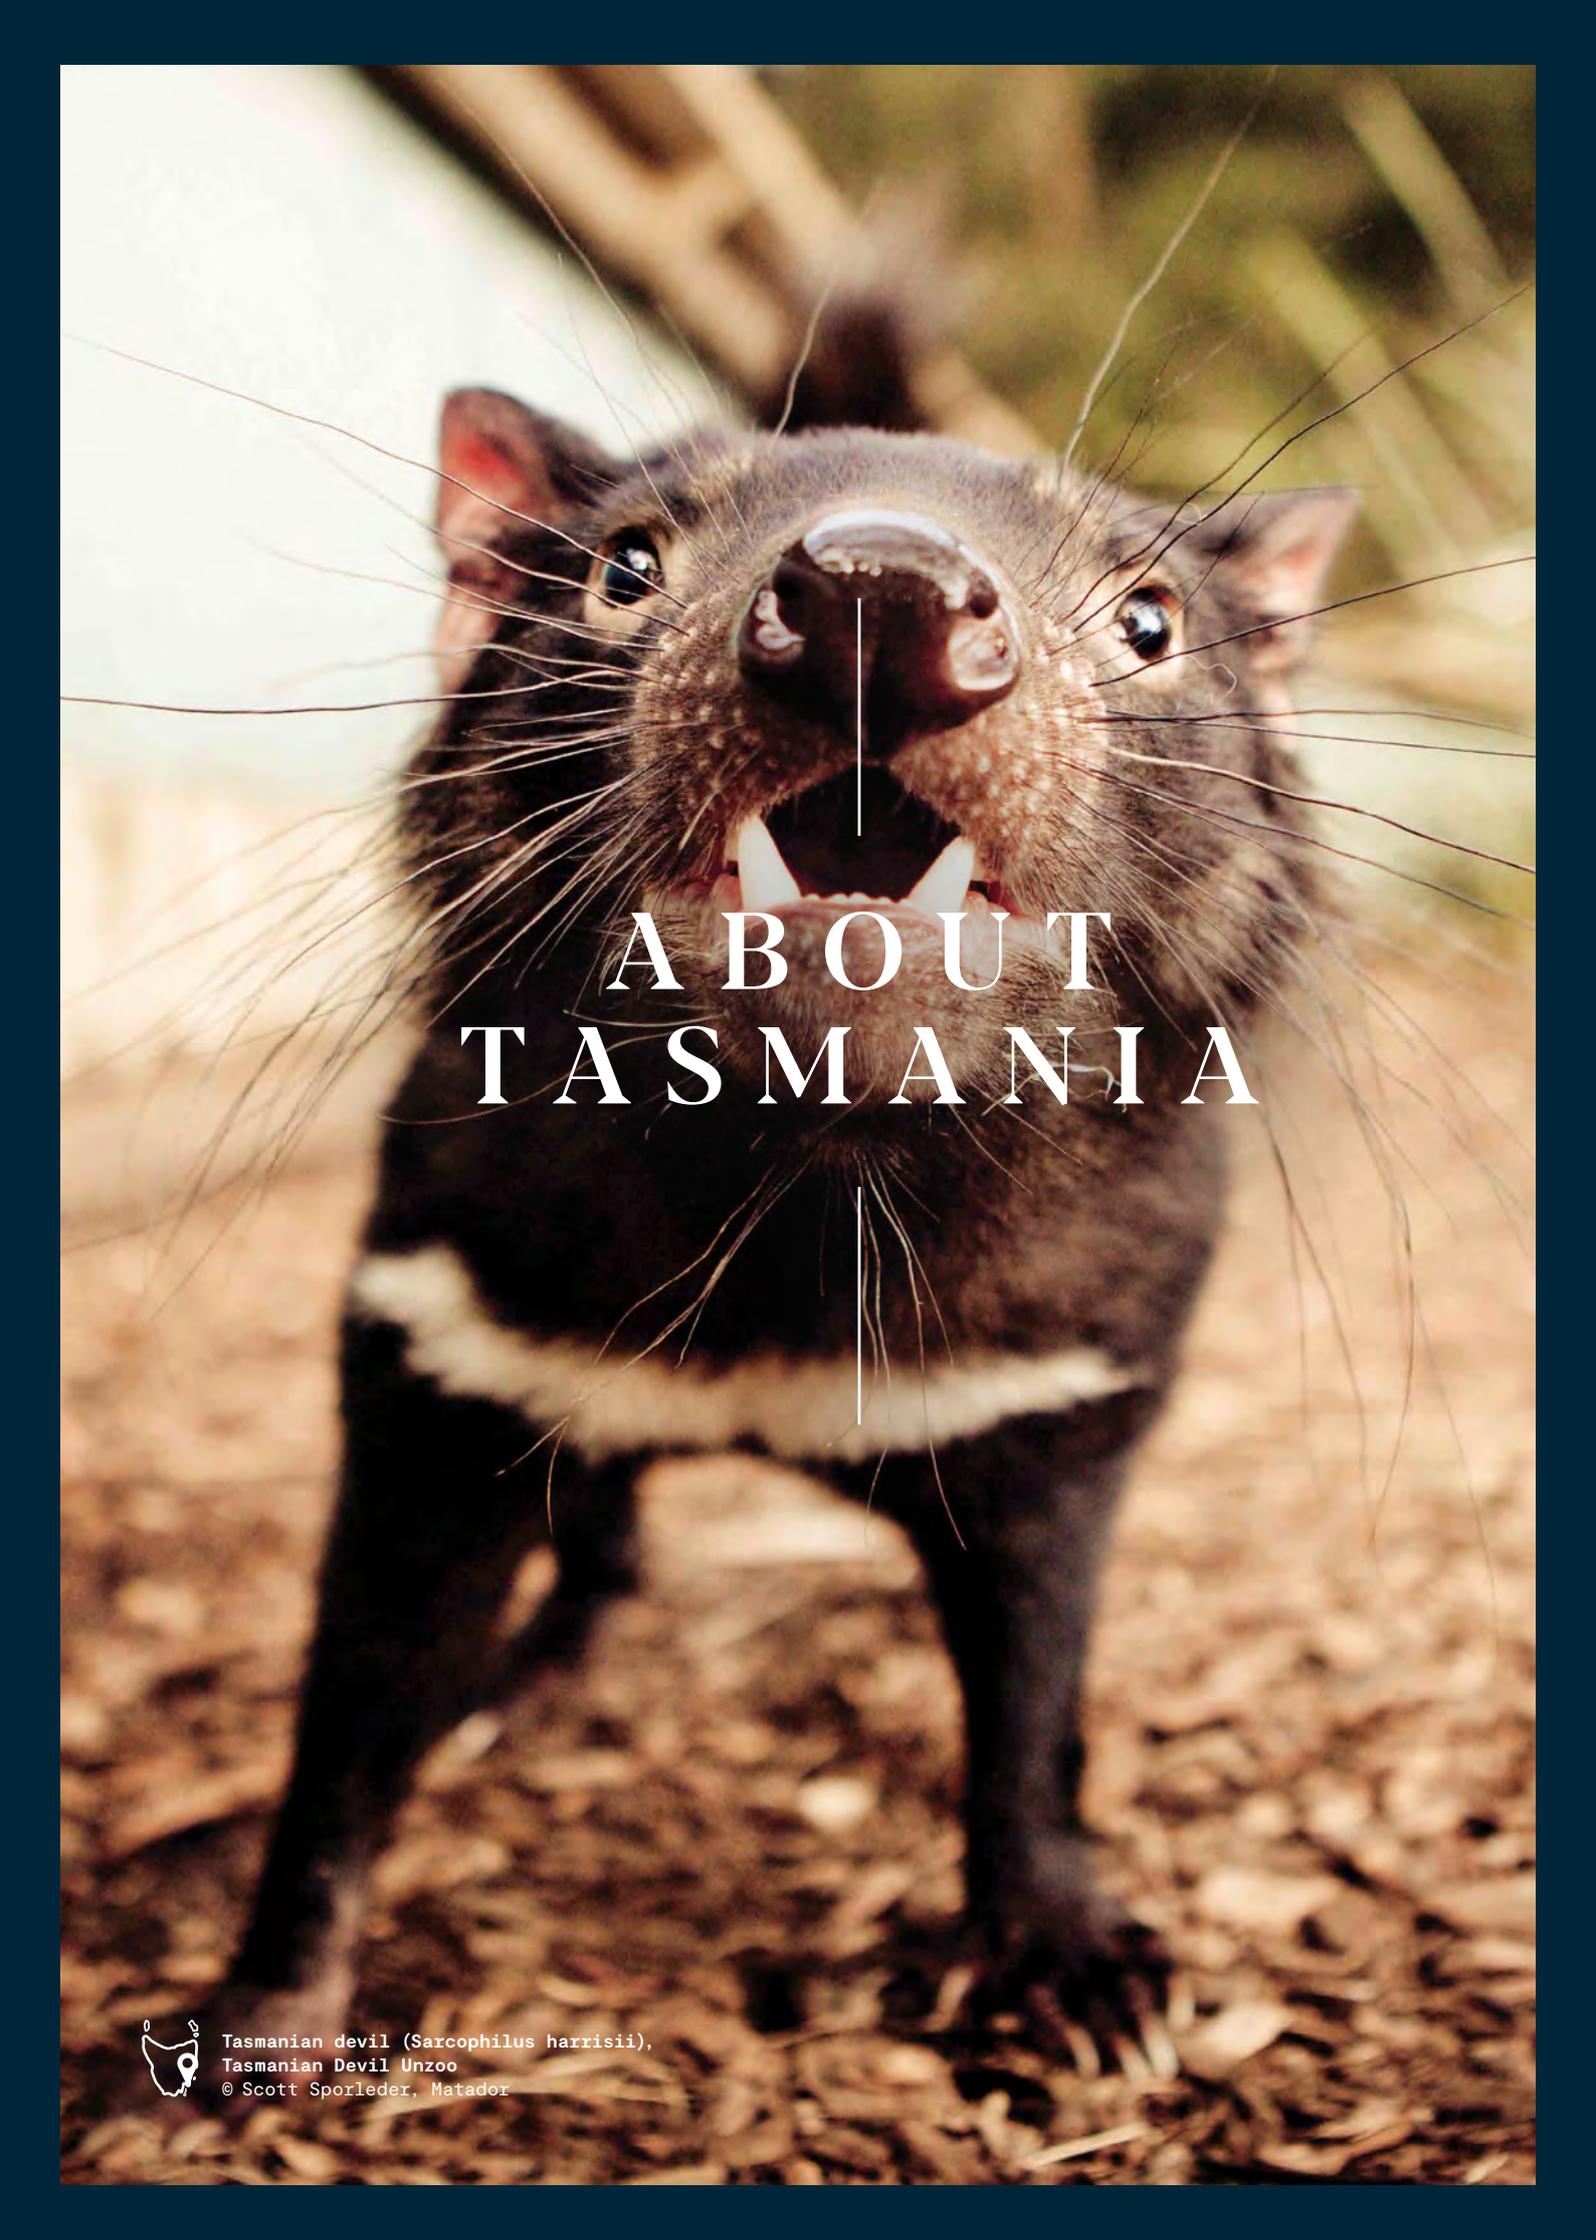

About 40 per cent of the island is protected as national parks, reserves and UNESCO World Heritage areas and, remarkably, these wild places are easily accessible. Hike the tallest sea cliffs in the southern hemisphere, and breathe some of the purest air in the world. In World Heritage wilderness, walk in valleys where Huon pines grow for thousands of years, where rivers meet rare temperate rainforest, and snow-peaked mountains shadow buttongrass plains. See wildlife that exists nowhere else on Earth.

Geographic isolation has contributed to unique biodiversity, and it has also fostered a rare community of creative, down-to-earth, resourceful people with time to make you feel welcome. This is a place where seasonality and hospitality go hand in hand.

One of the joys of travelling in Tasmania is not just the chance to taste produce straight from the farm and ocean, but the ease of meeting the makers at cellar doors, farm gates and local markets. And with four distinct seasons, there's always something new to see, taste and feel.

This is a place for adventure, however you define it. Test yourself on scores of mountain-bike trails, tee off on top-ranked golf courses overlooking Bass Strait, cast for wild brown trout in glacial tarns, and raft on wild rivers. Find stories and freedom on road trips connecting wild places, quintessential Tassie towns and friendly locals.

Whether the view is from the privacy of a hot tub in a forest, from a kayak for two, or fireside with Tassie whisky and friends, the world looks different from Tasmania.

Where we are

Australia's only island state lies about 250km across the formidable Bass Strait from Victoria. Next stop south is Antarctica, 3000km away. Surrounded by the Tasman Sea, the strait and the mighty Southern Ocean, Tasmanians breathe some of the cleanest air in the world. The island, and the 334 smaller islands that make up the Tasmanian archipelago, is directly in the path of the Roaring Forties, at latitude 42 degrees south, and is about the size of the Republic of Ireland: 315km from east to west and 286km from north to south. The population is about 541 500, with almost half living in the state capital of Hobart, established in 1804 and Australia's second-oldest city.

west coast has an annual average rainfall of 2 400mm, which sustains the island's cool temperate rainforests.

No matter when you travel here, it's important to prepare for sudden changes in the weather, and especially if you're bushwalking. Pack warm, fast-drying layers for maximum flexibility, particularly in the cooler months, and be sure to carry extra warm clothing and a waterproof jacket.

Getting around

Tasmania's compact size, diverse landscapes and network of roads covering most of the state create superb touring.

Travellers can hire cars or vans, bring their own from the mainland on the Spirit of Tasmania ferry between Melbourne and Devonport, or join a coach tour or a small escorted group. There are no public trains.

Weather

Tasmania's four distinct seasons are reason to travel year-round. Average maximum temperatures in summer, from December to March, are 17-23°C (63-73°F). Average maximum winter temperatures, from June to August, are 3-11°C (37-52°F). Enjoy beach life and blooming lavender fields in summer, the 'turning of the fagus' in autumn when Australia's only native deciduous tree turns brilliant colours, fish for wild brown trout in spring, and in winter join solstice festivals (fancy a communal nude swim?) and warm up around hot tubs and log fires with fine Tassie whisky.

Rainfall varies significantly across the island. Hobart is the second-driest capital city in Australia (after Adelaide), while the Wilderness and wildlife

About 40 per cent of the island is protected in national parks and reserves, and vast tracts of wilderness have UNESCO World Heritage status. Remarkably, much of it is within easy reach of the island's cities.

Among the diversity of plants and animals are a relatively large number of endemic species, found nowhere else on Earth. This 'living museum' was created when sea levels rose at the end of the last Ice Age some 12 000 years ago, separating Tasmania from the rest of Australia. With relatively intact habitat and few introduced predators or pests, Tasmania is a refuge for fascinating creatures. The most prominent are platypuses and echidnas (egg-laying mammals, called monotremes) and marsupials including wombats, wallabies, quolls, and the endangered Tasmanian devil.

Many animals are nocturnal and elusive, though a walk at dawn or dusk will often reward a patient observer. Or visit one of several wildlife sanctuaries for tours and closer encounters. And look up – Tasmania is one of the few places in the world to see the natural light show of Aurora Australis, or the Southern Lights. Year-round sightings anywhere on the island are possible, though long dark winter nights in the southern region offer the best chance.

Unordinary adventures

Whatever your passion, Tasmania is the place to pursue it.

Walking

There are 2 800km of managed walking tracks and more than 880 walks in national parks, reserves and conservation areas. Head out on one of 60 Great Short Walks or a multi-day bushwalk; among the most popular is the 65km Overland Track. Take an easy stroll or prepare for a challenge, go DIY camping or join a luxe guided walk.

Fly fishing

Arguably the world's purest strain of wild brown trout thrives in the fresh water of more than 3 000 Tasmanian waterways, from Central Highland lakes and the broad rivers of the south to meadow streams in the north. Crystal-clear water allows superb sight fishing in season, from August to April (...sight fishing involves seeing the fish and casting to it, rather than guessing where it is).

Mountain bike riding

Tasmania's global reputation as an exceptional mountain biking destination is growing as bike parks and trail networks expand. Among them are Blue Derby (125km of trails, north-east Tasmania); St Helens Mountain Bike Trails, comprising the Bay of Fires Trail (a 42km ride from mountain to sea) and the St Helens Stacked Loop Network (66km of trails with eight stacked loops, also in the north east); Wild Mersey Mountain Bike Trails (more than 100km of trails in the north west); and on the rugged west coast, the challenging new Mount Owen network spans 35km on the rocky slopes above Queenstown; and Maydena Bike Park (73 trails in the Derwent Valley, known as the largest gravity park in the world).

Golf

Among some 65 golf courses are links perched on rugged coastlines, holes scattered in sand dunes, and others surrounded by paddocks grazed by sheep. Tasmania has four of the top 13 Australian golf courses, as ranked by Australian Golf Digest: Barnbougle Dunes and Barnbougle Lost Farm at Bridport, and Cape Wickham Golf Links and Ocean Dunes on King Island.

Arts, culture and events

Wild terrain, fascinating history and a try-anything spirit give Tasmania a special creative energy and inspire an active community of artists, designers and performers. Mona, the provocative private museum near Hobart, presents an alternative universe of ideas and expression, and a diverse range of singular galleries, museums and seasonal events connect travellers to island life. There's a lot to celebrate, from scallops and garlic to mural painting and penny-farthing racing, and much more.

History and heritage

Much of Tasmania's rich and complex history is tangible in streetscapes, gardens and homes, and preserved by World Heritage status. Deepen your understanding of Tasmanian Aboriginal stories and connection to country through palawa guided experiences. Learn about the 76 000 convicts transported to Tasmania (known then as Van Diemen's Land) between 1804 and 1853 at evocative open-air museums – five of Australia's 11 World Heritage convict sites are in Tasmania, among more than 1000 convict sites across the island.

Food and wine

One of the joys of travelling in Tasmania is not just the pleasure of tasting farm-fresh and ocean-fresh produce, but the ease of meeting farmers and makers at cellar doors, farm gates and local markets. A growing collection of paddock-to-plate experiences, tasting trails, wine trails, cooking schools and gourmet walking tours allows travellers to forage, cook, taste and learn first-hand.

Tasmania's reputation for great produce is based on its highly fertile land and ocean, clean water, strong biosecurity practices and GMO-free status, and the rhythm of four distinct seasons. Slow down and pick your own apples and pears – Tasmania is known as the Apple Isle for its 200-year history of growing, canning and fermenting the fruit. In summer, gather cherries and raspberries at farms across the north and south. In winter, hunt for truffles.

Expect great seafood year-round, including wild-caught abalone, though peak season for scallops and oysters is winter, and rock lobsters – known locally as crayfish – are abundant in summer. Some of the world's finest pasture for beef and dairy spans the north west. The roll-call of star produce from the island includes grass-fed beef from Kennaook / Cape Grim and King Island, Robbins Island wagyu, and Pyengana cloth-matured cheddar. Inhale the scent of a rare temperate rainforest in leatherwood honey: intense, floral and found only in Tasmania.

Follow one of the island's four regional wine trails and taste cool-climate wines at cellar doors ranging from heritage stables to designer sheds. Tasmania is particularly known for its pinot noir and sparkling wines, as well as small-batch whisky, cider, beer, gin and vodka. Island distillers are a resourceful bunch, making paddock-to-bottle rye whisky in a DIY still fuelled by biodiesel, for example, flavouring gin with native mountain pepperberry, and distilling vodka from sheep's whey, the byproduct of an on-site cheesery.

Road trips

Tasmania's diverse landscapes, relatively compact size and extensive road network make this one of the world's great self-drive destinations. Though the island can be crossed from Hobart to Launceston in two-and-a-half hours, the pleasure of driving in Tasmania is taking time to explore villages, meet local people, take walks and stop at farm gates and cellar doors along the way.

The island has five well-signposted drive journeys: the Great Eastern Drive on the east coast; Northern Forage across northern Tasmania; Western Wilds in the west; Southern Edge in the south; and the Heartlands in central Tasmania.

As well, the island is criss-crossed by a network of self-drive 'experience' trails that showcase historical themes and food and wine regions, plus routes for lovers of whisky, gin, cider and beer.

SOUTHERN * EDGE

For every epic landscape in southern Tasmania, there's a seascape to match, or a deep, wide river running through it. Southern Edge road trips are framed by water and defined by the edges of river and sea. Follow country roads past the bays and hidden coves of the broad D'Entrecasteaux Channel, swing by the farm gates and cider houses of the Huon Valley along the mighty Huon River, and detour by ferry for just-shucked oysters and farmhouse cheeses on Bruny Island. Venture to Australia's southernmost edge, next stop Antarctica, and into the Southwest Wilderness. Come for wildlife watching and just-harvested produce, for star-gazing and solitude, and follow paths edged by forest, river and ocean.

NORTHERN FORAGE

Framed by a wild coastline fronting Bass Strait, threaded by rivers and thatched by some of the most fertile farms and pasture in Australia, road trips across northern Tasmania are a chance to slow down and follow your food from paddock to plate. Stop at farm gates, distilleries and cellar doors along the way for tastings and to meet the makers. Linger in rural villages and quirky coastal towns. Marvel at the monumental landmarks of The Nut and Table Cape. Plunge deep into wilderness. Plot a route from ocean to valley, forest to farm, and forage from breakfast to dinner.

GREAT EASTERN DRIVE

Just when you've seen the longest, loveliest beach, the road sweeps around and another sparkling coastline stretches ahead. Road trips along Tasmania's east coast take in laidback hinterland villages and a string of classic holiday towns along stretches of uncrowded beaches and dramatic shoreline.

The perfect arc of Wineglass Bay is among these gems, along with the magical combo of white sand, turquoise ocean and orange boulders at Bay of Fires. Many of these coastal views open wide into heath and eucalypt forest, flanked by islands and mountains protected as national parks and threaded with walking tracks. Embrace simple luxuries – the time to pull over and follow a beach track, soak in a hot tub with water views, order catch of the day at a seafood shack, and fall asleep with an ocean sound track.

WESTERN WILDS

Tasmania's west is globally recognised for its wilderness. Less known are the human stories of the region: epic tales of an ancient Aboriginal culture that has thrived for thousands of years, of pioneers who tackled extraordinary challenges, of mining booms and busts. On Western Wilds road trips through wild landscapes, ghost towns and streetscapes studded with ornate Victorian and Art Deco features, hear stories of bold enterprises and endurance, of folly and grand vision. Climb aboard a steam train through rainforest, and raft the rivers. Chat with locals, and abseil a mighty dam wall. Drive the 99 Bends, and cruise a river of countless reflections. On the edge of a vast harbour, facing the Roaring Forties fresh from South America, discover a place like nowhere else.

HEARTLANDS

A journey in central Tasmania can span a couple of hours or thousands of years – Heartlands road trips have a way of nudging your sense of time and history in unexpected directions. Detour on convict-built roads for old-fashioned country hospitality. Stroll among glorious Georgian-era facades and gardens in heritage towns. Take a country lane hemmed by hedgerows and follow the contours of paddocks that have produced fine merino wool for generations. Venture into the Central Highlands and north to the Great Western Tiers, a wild landscape of lakes, mountains and moors, and follow a 'power trail' for immersion in hydro industrial history.

Before setting off, visit the Tasmanian Museum and Art Gallery in Hobart or the Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery in Launceston to learn more about the story of Tasmanian Aboriginal People and their ongoing culture and custodianship of country.

CONVICT TRAIL

From historic Richmond to the Tasman National Park, Teralina / Eaglehawk Neck and Port Arthur Historic Site, this fascinating trail is rich in convict history and natural beauty. The Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula is a place of breathtaking seascapes, some of the tallest sea cliffs in the world and wild ocean views.

HIGHLANDS POWER TRAIL

Trace the history of Tasmania's hydroelectric scheme through the Central Highlands. Don't miss the Waddamana Power Station, commissioned in 1916 and at the heart of 80 years of hydroelectricity development in Tasmania.

CRADLE TO COAST TASTING TRAIL

Follow your nose to more than 30 of the north west's finest farms, cellar doors, distilleries and makers.

WINE TRAILS

Plot a course between cellar doors on the island's four well-established cool-climate wine trails: the Tamar Valley Wine Trail, the Cradle Coast Wine Trail, the East Coast Wine Trail, and the Southern Wine Trail. Nominate your designated driver, follow country roads and allow time for cellar-door chatting.

TASMAN WINE AND SPIRITS TRAIL

Discover boutique wineries and artisan distilleries among the landscapes and historic sites of the Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula.

TASMANIAN BEER TRAIL

Visit more than 20 breweries, sample local brews and uncover Tasmania's rich beer-making history, dating back to convict times.

TASMANIAN CIDER TRAIL

HOBART AND SOUTH

From wildlife to city life, a tour of Tassie's southern region spans the compact capital of Hobart, some of the nation's most evocative convict sites, charming country towns, Bruny Island, the orchards and farm gates of the Huon Valley, and vast tracts of World Heritage wilderness. All roads end here – Cockle Creek is the southernmost point you can drive in Australia.

Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula

Best known for the Port Arthur convict site, 300m-high sea cliffs, dramatic coastline, and the Three Capes Track. Access is via Teralina / Eaglehawk Neck, an isthmus just 30m wide and once guarded by dogs to prevent convicts escaping.

Bruny Island

Catch the ferry across D'Entrecasteaux Channel to Bruny, known for its coastal walks, bird and marine life, and outstanding produce, particularly oysters, artisanal cheese, craft beer and smallgoods.

Huon Valley

Pass orchards, vineyards, waterways and riverside towns until you reach tall forests, underground caverns and World Heritage wilderness. The road ends at Cockle Creek, the trailhead for the 85km South Coast Track.

Derwent Valley

Upstream from Hobart, the River Derwent narrows, passing vineyards and the old town of New Norfolk. Deeper in the valley are the hopfields of Bushy Park, the lakes and waterfalls of Mount Field National Park and the road into the Southwest Wilderness, ending at the mighty double arch of the Gordon Dam.

Southern Midlands

Follow the Heritage Highway through rolling farmland and explore towns such as Oatlands and Bothwell. Sculptural silhouettes of convicts and bushrangers along the highway recall the region's storied colonial past.

Richmond

Explore the town's Georgian streetscape, cross Australia's oldest bridge, check the Wine Wall and taste the cool-climate wines of the Coal River Valley.

Lake St Clair

Australia's deepest lake forms the southern end of Cradle Mountain-Lake St Clair National Park in the Central Highlands. Nearby is The Wall in the Wilderness, a 100m series of carved panels in Huon pine depicting the region's history.

LAUNCESTON AND NORTH

Northern Tasmania is celebrated for its rich farmland, cool-climate vineyards and heritage estates producing superb food and wines with great paddock-to-plate experiences.

Launceston

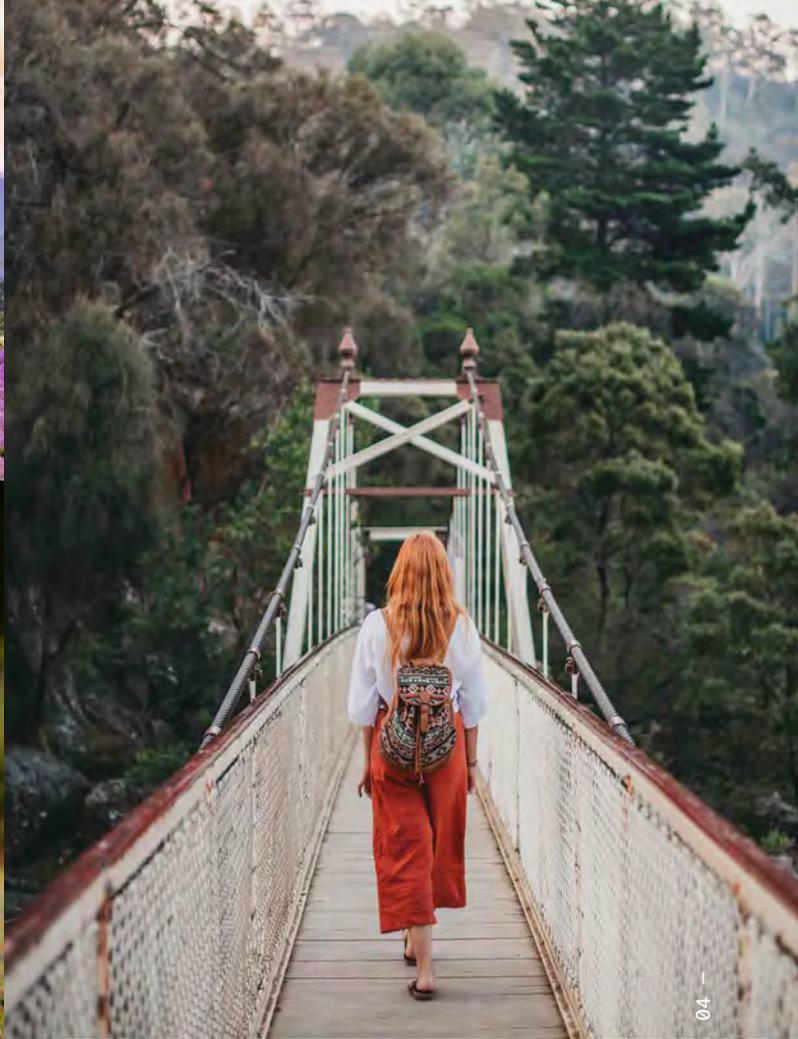

Just an hour's flight from Melbourne and 90 minutes from Sydney, Tassie's second-biggest city is an ideal launchpad. Launceston has one of the best-preserved Georgian and Victorian cityscapes in Australia, and a thriving food and drink scene. Shop and learn at the Saturday-morning farmers' market, walk in Cataract Gorge, a slice of wild in the heart of the city, and don't miss Queen Victoria Museum & Art Gallery and Design Tasmania.

FLINDERS ISLAND

Off Tasmania's north-east coast, Flinders Island is the largest of the Furneaux Group's 52 islands in Bass Strait. With a population of about 1 000, distinctive produce and rugged scenery, Flinders offers a true island-off-an-island experience. Eat crayfish on Flinders Wharf, walk long deserted beaches, watch birds or go fishing, or fossick for Killiecrankie diamonds, a pale, lustrous topaz found on the windswept shores of Killiecrankie Bay. With abundant crayfish, abalone and scallops and quality lamb and beef, the island's reputation for special paddock- and ocean-to-plate experiences is growing.

KING ISLAND

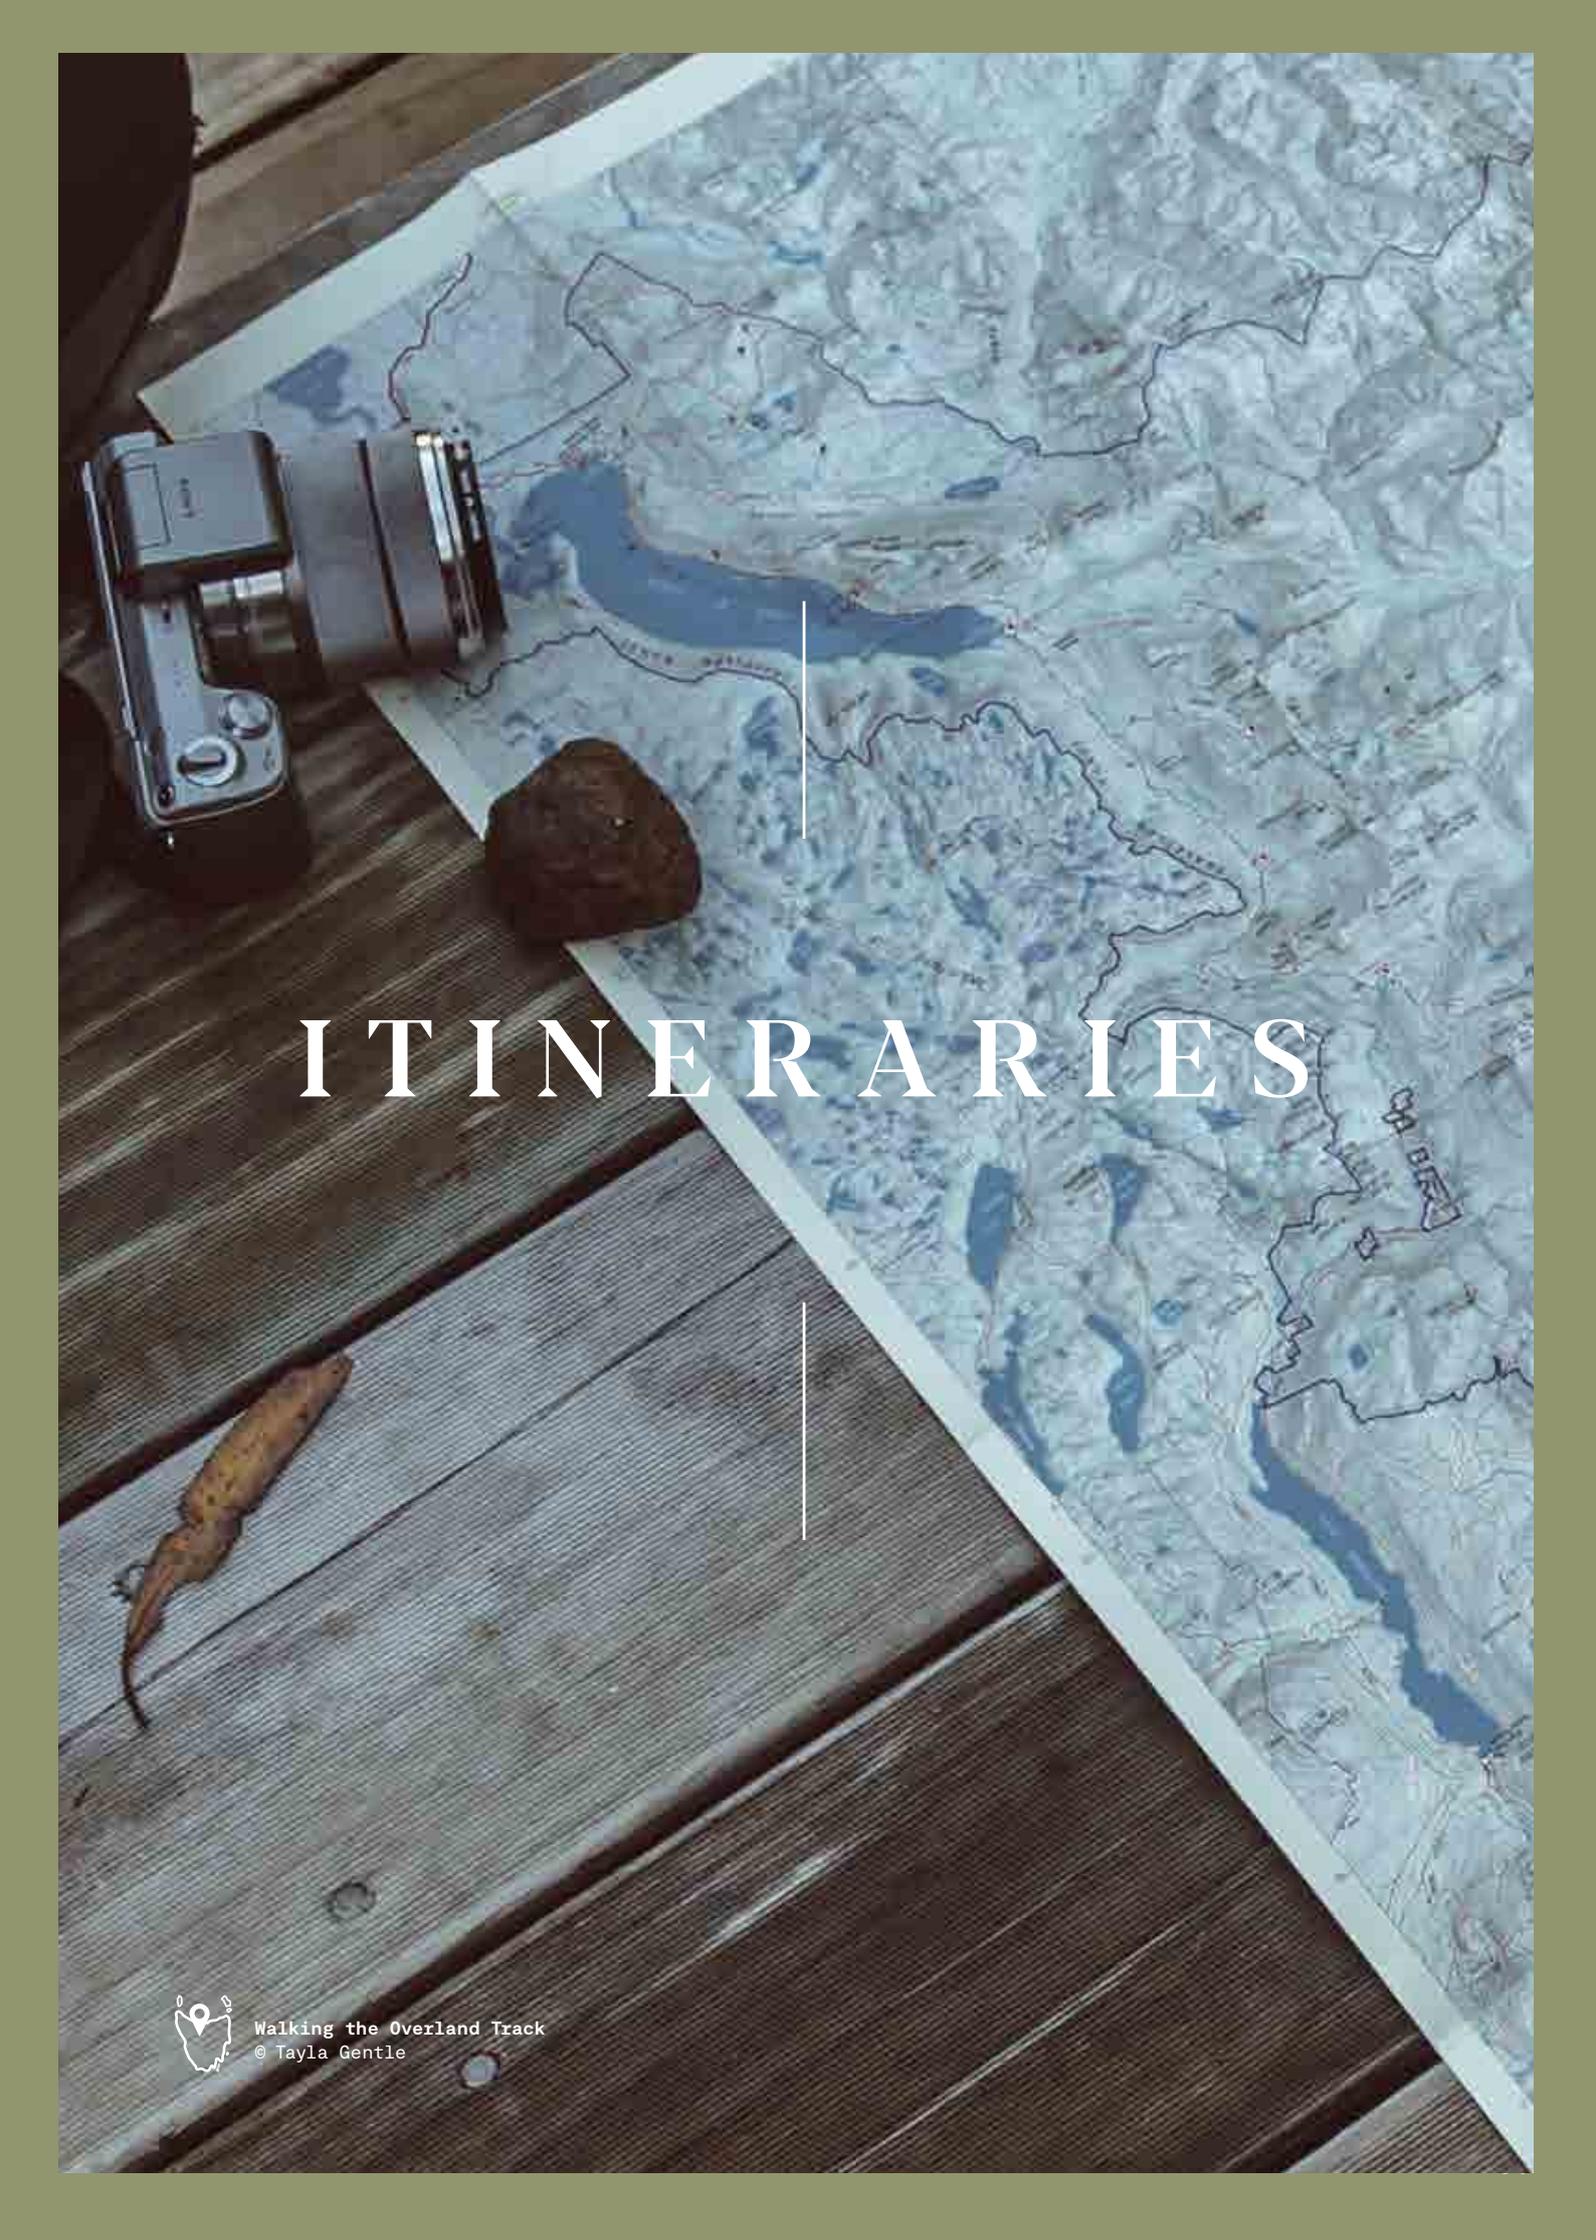

Some 80km off Tasmania's northwest coast, King Island has rugged coastline, famously good produce and seafood, a rich seafaring history and some of the finest golf experiences in the world. Two oceanfront links are ranked among Australia's top 13 (Ocean Dunes is #13, Cape Wickham is #2) golf courses by Australian Golf Digest: Cape Wickham on the rugged north coast, and Ocean Dunes on the west coast. Expect holes almost in the sea and sightings of whales and seals. Take a deep breath of salty air, and swing.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Tee off at two top-ranked golf courses: Cape Wickham and Ocean Dunes.
- See the Calcified Forest near the island's southernmost tip, the limestone remains of an ancient forest.
